Q: On mouse move update that the div has moved `$('.holder').mousemove(function(e){ $('.radius').css({'left':e.pageX - ($('#.holder').width() / 2),'top':e.pageY - ($('#.holder').height() / 2),'position':'absolute'}); });` my problem is that it updates when the mouse moves, but it wont work if it is moved off screen, or when the client opens a new tab in his browser and the window is closed.

A: You have to bind to the mousemove event of the window, not the document.

`$('.holder').mousemove(function(e) {
$('.radius').css({'left': e.pageX - ($('#.holder').width() / 2), 'top': e.pageY - ($('#.holder').height() / 2), 'position': 'absolute' }); });` What you're doing now is updating the position of the div every time the mouse moves, which is what makes it not work when the page is not on screen. The family of a former Philadelphia police officer is upset and demanding answers after video surfaced of the teen's mom allegedly ranting against the officer. Pastor Steven Thomas Jr. posted the video of the incident, which happened on Nov. 19 at his church. Stephen also took the incident viral on his Facebook page — and it's been shared thousands of times. "She was ranting about how police are racist and stuff like that," said Samantha Fisk, who is the pastor's daughter. The Thomas family had been going to the church since Stephen was a baby. "I never thought we'd have a problem at our church," Samantha said. Police say they responded to the church for a domestic dispute. Pastor Stevens Sr., Stephen's father, showed his badge and told people to stay inside. According to his family, a woman in the crowd kept calling a detective a "ner." "He was like, 'Let's get this lady out of here,'" Samantha said. Samantha says the mother of the teenager was upset and started saying "black lives matter" over and over. "A lot of people got up, went outside to be like, 'Let's just try to calm her down,'" Samantha said. But at one point, the officers gave up and left. "To come in a church and you're going to be judged by people you work with," the pastor said. Samantha says Stephen's mother also showed up at the police station and demanded that they "get the cops off her son." "It's just horrible," Samantha said. Pastor Stevens says the officers just wanted to help, but it was enough to upset his son. "And I could tell that was breaking him down," Samantha said. The pastor says his son is upset and feels like he's being targeted because he's African-American. "They feel like they can do anything to him," Samantha said. The family tells Eyewitness News they want an apology from the officers. "We're glad that it got on Facebook,
