Ok, I wanted to love this. I didn't even get to far and realized I had to return this. I tried the experience first, really wanted to feel like I was on the titanic and get a feeling for what they must have felt. As I'm listening to the captain tell his first mate to try and contact a ship I noticed the graphics were not the best and somewhat blurry, I could fix this I thought. I turned around to look out at the woman and children on the escape ships I noticed vertical lines everywhere. It felt like I was looking at a messed up monitor. I thought maybe something wonky was up with my computer so I restarted and tried again, still there. Looked for mention of it from someone else before I wrote this review as I don't want to steer anyone in the wrong direction if it is my computer. Found others mentioning this. Sadly have to return it, wanted to love it. Maybe they'll fix it down the road and I can pick it up.. Pretty poor and very buggy. I hate having to not recommend this title but it did not live up to expectation. The snapshot of the voyage was very brief, no showing of the ship before sinking, no showing of the ship hitting the iceberg and a greatly accelerated rendition of the sinking which was a bit sterile and the graphics too basic.

I love what they have tried to capture with sitting in the lifeboat which was well done but it was just not enough.

The majority of the game is exploring the wreck 100 years later with a basic mini game. While this was a nice addon I personally would have preferred for the focus to have been on the voyage and the sinking itself.

After Apollo 11 I had great hopes for this title especially when I heard there would be real actors however it did not live up to what I was expecting. I would not pay for the title given the chance again and think it would be better suited as a subscription play.. Educational, relaxing tour of the ship.
